Shilo Preshyon is a Vancouver Island–based musician, artist, producer, and audio engineer of mixed Lebanese, Mi'kmaq, and Acadian heritage. A dedicated community builder, he connects artists across the West Coast through collaboration and mentorship. His work reflects the natural and social environments that surround him, drawing inspiration from found materials, technology, and the intersection of art, ecology, and healing.

Primarily self-taught in music, recording, and sound design, Shilo approaches his craft with curiosity and experimentation. His background in community mental health and support work, including time at the Portland Hotel Society and the Garth Homer Society, informs his practice with empathy and a deep commitment to accessibility and inclusion in the arts.

Living with chronic migraines, autoimmune disorders, and PTSD, Shilo channels personal challenges into creative expression and connection, using his art to explore resilience and grounding in the contemporary world. He is currently the head engineer and host of Risque Disque Studios, an artist-run recording and residency space in Yellow Point, BC, where he prioritizes mentorship and recording opportunities for underrepresented artists and emerging engineers. He is also a founding member of the artist collectives Ba'as, a small sounder, Soup Du Jour, and Tasty Palm Leaf.
